3 Settlers Get Life In Israel

12 More Have Lighter Terms for Attacks on Arabs

By William Claiborne Washington Post Service

JERUSALEM — An Israeli court sentenced three Jewish serlers convicted of murdering Arabs to mandatory life imprisonment Monday. It handed down light sentences for 12 other members of a Jewish underground organization that operated in the Israeli-occu-pied West Bank for four years.

The crimes for which the settlers were sentenced included the 1980 attempt to assassinate three Palesthian West Bank mayors; the 1983 murder of three Arab students in Hebron; the 1984 planting of bombs on five civilian Arab buses in East Jerusalem; the planting of bombs at mosques in Hebron; and an unsuccessful conspiracy to blow up the Dome of the Rock Mosque on the Temple Mount in Jerusalem's Old City.

The panel of three judges handed down sentences ranging from three to seven years for 11 of the settlers.

They could have received terms of up to 20 years. One of those convicted of participating, in the attack on the Arab mayors walked out of the courtroom when all of his three-year sentence was suspended except for time already served awaiting trial

The defendants cheered and threw their arms around one another in the East Jerusalem District Court. The courtroom was packed with supporters from West Bank settlements who proclaimed the defendants "heroes of Israel."

The 13-month trial was deeply emotive for the Israeli public as the defendants were vigorously sup-ported by leaders of the Jewish settlement movement in the West Bank and by many members of Israel's parliament from the Likud bloc and other rightist parties.

WASHINGTON — The Joint Chiefs of Staff have recommended against U.S. ratification of internanonally agreed revisions of the 1949 Geneva Conventions on treat-ment of combatants and war victims, administration officials say.

The intent of the revisions is to enhance humane treatment of combatants and civilians during war. But the main concern of the loint Chiefs is that the revisions, or pro-tocols, as they are known, would have the effect of legitimizing national liberation movements and terrorists, granting them combat-ant and prisoner of war status.

While the matter is still under review, the prevailing view is that President Ronald Reagan is unlikely to recommend Senate rapifica-son of the protocols dealing with warfare in the face of such objec-cation would await a formal study by the Joint Chiefs. More than 100 nations have signed the protocols and more than 40 have ratified them. Only formal ratification gives the treaty legal force.

State Department officials said that Denmark and Norway had ratified the protocols and that Britain, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, and the Netherlands were moving toward ratification. The officials said they did not expect France to ratify Protocol I and did not expect Israel to ratify either protocol.

Protocol I deals with interna-tional armed conflicts, and Protocol II with noninternational conflicts. The administration's problems are with Protocol I, which would give regional political groups such as the Organization of African Unity the authority to judge whether liberation movements such as the African National Congress are legitimate parties to an armed conflict, thus granting their fighters the same measure of protection as regular soldiers. Critics contend that other provisions in Protocol I are worded so vaguely that the distinctions be-tween guerrillas and soldiers would be blurred. As a result, they say, gnerrillas could claim the same protection granted regular prisoners of war and thus avoid prosecution un-der criminal law for what might otherwise be considered terrorist MANILA — Opposition legisla-tors filed an impeachment resolution Monday against President Ferdinand E. Marcos, accusing him of "permitting and abetting economic sabotage" through large overseas investments by relatives, friends and government officials.

The resolution, the first such

WASHINGTON (IHT) — Overseas taxpayers who have not filed their U.S. income tax returns for 1982 and 1983 must get their returns in by Tuesday or lose the earned income exclusion for those years, the Internal Revenue Service said.

The returns will be considered to be filed in time if they carry a readable postmark for July 23 or if they are turned in at U.S. embassies or consulates with IRS offices before the close of business on Tuesday, wages, salaries and self-employment income — for 1982 and up to $80,000 in 1983.

Charles Bruce, a tax attorney, advised that some taxpayers may want to file "protective returns" — using rough income numbers and claiming the exclusion — then amending these returns after the deadline to correct any mistakes. He said that this would probably be easier and more successful than trying to challenge the deadline in court.

BONN (UPI) — A leading East German nuclear scientist has defected to West Germany, West German newspapers said Monday.

They said that the scientist, Peter Adler, 46, accompanied by his wife and Il-year-old son, arrived in West Germany last week from Vienna, where he worked for the International Atomic Energy Agency. The agency oversees the civilian use of nuclear technology to ensure that it is

The newspaper Die Welt described Mr. Adler as one of the leading East German nuclear scientists. It said he had held top jobs for the last six years. The Bild newspaper said the scientist defected because of dissatis-faction with political and ideological conditions in East Germany.

Berri Calls for Removal of Gemayel

BEIRUT (AP) - A Shiite Moslem leader, Nabih Berri, called Monday for the replacement of President Amin Gemayel's government and said a meeting of Islamic nations would be held next month, under Syrian sponsorship, to try to end inter-Moslem feuds.

Mr. Bern, who returned here from Damascus after a two-week visit with his Syrian supporters, said the meeting would be in Damascus. The Syrians, the main power-broker in Lebanon, have been trying to resolve inter-Moslem fends in preparation for an overall settlement for Lebanon's civil war, which extends to Christians and Palestinian refugees.

But for Mr. Boths, that is apparently not possible, South African EC Sets Conference on Treaty Reform

BRUSSELS (Reuters) - European Community foreign ministers decided Monday to call a special conference to discuss proposals that could water down the authority of national governments, but Britain warned against solutions that were not acceptable to all.

The British foreign secretary, Sir Geoffrey Howe, whose government was among three that originally opposed such a conference, said the meeting, set Sept. 9 in Luxembourg, could succeed only by common accord. It will tackle proposals for a wider European union that split last month's Milan summit meeting.

The ministers set up two groups of senior officials to prepare the conference. One will discuss changes in present treaties to expand the EC's competence to noneconomic matters and give wider powers to the European Commission and the European Parliament. The second will handle proposals for wider foreign policy coordination.

Winning Acceptance in U.S. By Lee May

and Paul Houston Los Angeles Times Service
WASHINGTON — After years of bitter controversy, affirmative action in the workplace has achieved a grudging acceptance among American workers and employers alike.

Despite continuing sharp criticism from the Reagan administration, the anxieties created when minorities and women first received preferential treatment in hiring to compensate for generations of discrimination have begun to ebb

The world didn't come to an end and the walls didn't tumble down," said James Burton, equal opportunity affairs manager at Monsanto Co. "As a result, we're seeing a different attitude toward seeing a different animal dward looking at people as individuals."

Edward Gaffey, a young white police recruit in Boston, fears the department's affirmative action program could hold back his career. But like many other whites affected by such programs, he con-cedes that increasing the number of minority officers is a worthy goal and admis he "can't think of anything else" to achieve it.

The National Association of Mannfacturers, which represents 13,500 corporations, told a congressional committee this month that diversity in the work force resulting from affirmative action has "produced new ideas, opinions and perspectives in management, prod-uct development and marketing."

Peter Robertson, a Washington consultant on affirmative action to 215 of the nation's largest corporations, said a survey shows 95 per-cent of the companies plan to contime their efforts regardless of what the government does.

But the battle over quotas and other tools of affirmative action is far from over. Sporadic charges persist of reverse discrimination against white males, and of incompetence among minorities and women hired under affirmative ac-

And while the workplace has largely become reconciled to affirmative action as a method for hiring, the next step — progress in getting promotions for members of minority groups — has become a new source of tension.

Affirmative action dates from the 1964 Civil Rights Act, which established the federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission to investigate complaints of workplace discrimination and auployers to take steps to overcome the effects of past discrimination. Those steps could include quotas - requirements that, for example, one minority group member be hired for every new white worker

A year later, President Lyndon B. Johnson ordered large federal contractors to demonstrate progress toward diversifying their work forces, though strict mandatory quotas were not part of his executive order.

The result was a burst of complaints about racial discrimination in the workplace and a burgeoning of affirmative action plans. Between 1974 and 1980, according to the Labor Department, the number of minority workers em-ployed by companies with federal contracts grew by 20 percent, compared with a 12-percent increase in companies not involved in govern-ment work and having no affirma-tive action plans in force. For women, growih was 15 percent pared to 2 percent.

At the same time, complaints about the effect of such plans on white males began to rise. The Equal Employment Opportunity Commission received 1,556 formal charges of reverse discrimination by public employers alone in 1979 through 1983, for example.

have been accused of overzealousness. William McCarthy, a white Boston police officer, charges that the force has hired criminals and illiverates in its effort to boost minority employees. "I think your professionalism and your standards are being dropped down," he Larry Brown, a black officer and spokesman for the Massachusetts Association of Minority Law Enforcement Officers, calls that view racist. "Considering some of the white male police officers we have on this job, that's like -excuse the pun — the pot calling the kettle black," he said.

But opponents of affirmative action were given support by the Rea-gan administration, which con-tends that hiring and promotional preferences based on race or sex are nherently unfair and discriminatory. Earlier this year the Justice De-partment asked 51 state and city governments to alter existing plans for hiring and promoting women and minority members, usually in police and fire departments.

The Justice Department based its action on a 1984 Supreme Court its action on a 1904 supreme count decision holding that the city of Memphis had violated the seniority rights of white firefighters when it retained junior black firefighters and laid off more senior whites. What applies to layoffs, the department reasoned, should also apply to hiring and promotion.

Mayor Tom Bradley of Los Angeles, one of the cities asked to alter its hiring and promotion plans, charged that the approach by the Justice Department will result in expensive, time-consuming litiga-tion and will reopen old wounds." # Dole-Kemp Feud: Behind the Barbs, a Deep Republican Rivalry

By Steven V. Roberts New York Times Service
WASHINGTON — Senator Robert J. Dole of Kansas, the majority leader, was speaking recently to a group of college Re-publicans about tax reform. Representative Jack F. Kemp of New York, he cracked, wants a business deduction for hair spray. Mr. Kemp, who addressed the group later, shot back that during a recent fire Mr. Dole's library had burned. Both books in it were lost, he said, and Mr. Dolc had not finished coloring one of them. Mr. Dole and Mr. Kemp are two of the most dominant Republicans in Washington, and the rivalry between them has been ering for years. But it recent weeks it has crackled into the On one level the battle is political: Both men would like the Republican nomination for presi-dent in 1988. But their antagonism also reflects a deep rift in Republican ranks that in-volves economic policy and the future course of the party itself.

Many Republicans are alarmed at the rising animosity and would like to see it stop. Some Capitol watchers trace the rivalry to 1981 when the Kemp-Roth bill, cutting taxes by 25 percent, became law. Mr. Dole was the new chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, which handles tax legislation, and some Republicans say he considered Mr. Kemp an upstart and resented his success

"Kemp is not a legislator, and Dole is, and that really grates on Dole," said a Republican assis-

Beyond their personal rivalry, the two Republicans have a basic disagreement over economic policy. As an advocate of supply-side economics, Mr. Kemp stresses the importance of reducing taxes as the key to growth and prosperity. Rising delicits and interest rates, he insists, are caused by the tight money policies of the Federal Re-

As a more traditional conservative. Mr. Dole focuses on the deleterious effects of budget deficits. Solving that problem is the key to economic revival, he says, and if popular programs have to be cut and taxes have to be raised, that is a necessary price.

This disagreement has a broad-er political implication. Mr. Kemp says that by focusing on economic growth, the Republican Party can become the party of optimism and progress.

Mr. Dole retorts that if the Re-blicans bring down the deticit and thus revive the economy, the public will forget its temporary pain. If the party follows Mr. Kemp, he believes, the country will not grow out the deficit problem, and the voters will blame the Republicans for the subsequent economic disaster.

All this came to a head recently. Mr. Kemp was appalled at the budget adopted by Senate Republicans, which contained a freeze on increases in Social Security benefits. Mr. Kemp was also alarmed inching their way toward a tax increase. To make matters worse, he and other House Republicans were furning over their having been excluded when Mr. Dole put together his budget plan with the White House,

Meanwhile, changes in the White House stall were working to the advantage of Mr. Kemp and his allies.

James A. Baker 3d, a pragma tist in the Dole mold, left as chief of staff and was replaced by Donald T. Regan, a more ideological conservative with close ties to Mr. Kemp. So the New Yorker, by his own account, "called Don Regan and said. 'I think we can get this budget back on track."

The result was a meeting of Mr. Regan, Mr. Kemp and several others that produced a "frame-work" for a new budget compromise. A Social Security freeze was dropped; new taxes were ruled out yet again; and Mr. Dole was

One of the senator's aides called the Kemp-Regan meeting "a political cheap shot aimed at 1988," and added: "That's why Dole is so angry. We were bland-

There are no reliable figures on the number of Americans who now have access to computer bulletin boards. Computer industry analysts say that somewhat less than 10 percent of the nation's 85 million households have personal computers. A large majority of those home systems include a "modem," the device that gives computer owners access to bulletin boards through telephone lines. That would suggest that several million Americans can book up to bulletin boards from their homes, in addition to those who have access to a computer system at their

It is equally difficult to state accurately how many different bulletin board systems there are. # Cheap Dollar, Costly Deficit

A dollar now buys about 17 percent less excuse they needed to win more imprudent foreign currency than it did in February. Is protections against competing imports. that the longed-for descent and "soft landing" for which economists have been hoping?

Maybe. The dollar's decline from overvaluation should let efficient American exporters reclaim a share of world markets. It would also reduce pressure on Congress to protect inefficient producers from import competition.

But the decline also reflects the opinion of some corporate money managers that the American economy is sagging toward recession. If that is true, the fall of the dollar may have come too late to spare the United States the pain of higher unemployment. If no recession beckons, a weaker dollar could again drive up interest rates. With the dollar declining, the only sure way to widen the path between recession and credit squeeze is to reduce the federal budget deficit.

No one can be certain why foreign investors flocked to the dollar in the early 1980s, raising its exchange value by 50 percent. What is clear, though, is that the overvalued dollar increased the purchasing power of American consumers and belped hold down the U.S. inflation rate. In addition, foreign demand for dollar securi-ties made it possible for Washington to finance unprecedented federal budget deficits without driving up interest rates and crowding domestic borrowers out of the market.

But the lunch bought with Japanese and European credit was not free. The high-priced dollar made it almost impossible for even efficient American producers of everything from buildozers to cattle food to sell their goods abroad. And it gave failing industries, from apparel to motorcycles and steel, the protections against competing imports.

The decline in the dollar's value should help to correct imbalances that brought misery to America's heartland and still threaten relations with our Asian and European trading partners. The catch is that the huge surplus of dollars that foreigners earned from their exports to America will no longer be available to linance federal budget deficits.

And that leaves America's economic managers very little room for maneuver. The Federal Reserve could stand firm with its credit restraints, thus forcing the Treasury to compete with private borrowers for domestic savings. That would almost certainly result in a sharp increase in interest rates. Or the Fed could create the extra money needed to replace foreign loans, hoping the economy is slack enough to absorb it without raising inflation.

The prudent response to a better international currency balance would be to provide for a healthier domestic fiscal balance. The smaller the coming federal deficits, the fewer the savings the Treasury will absorb to finance them - and the greater the amount of credit left for private investors. The less that is left for such investors, the more likely they will bid up the cost of money and everything else.

For years, responsible analysts of the American economy have argued that it cannot support big budget deficits in good times. For years the economy has defied their predictions, sucking in foreign capital to sustain the binge. The Fed may once again grope its way through the muddle. But it is foolish to trust to luck for prosperity. The buck stops in Washington.

Another Troubled Missile

The conferces on the U.S. defense bill have a difficult and telling decision to make on the future of AMRAAM, the advanced mediumrange air-to-air missile that the Air Force and to a lesser extent the Navy have been banking on as a weapon of the future. The missile, which a pilot would fire when his target was still a radar blip, is in trouble. Some people think it is conceptually flawed. Technical problems continue to crop up as well; there have been long delays in designing and prepar-ing to build it. The projected cost has more than doubled in the past four years, to $10.8 billion for the program, $400,000 per missile. In January, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger took the unusual step of putting the new weapon on probation, saying no missiles would be bought until the Air Force satisfied him it had costs under control; a review is scheduled later this year.

The House responded by voting to kill the missile. The Senate, brushing aside the prob-lems, appropriated funds to begin production. The conferees must choose, but there is more is involved than just another weapon.

The new missile represents a major commitment on the part of the Air Force, a leap of faith as to the nature of future warfare. The service has come to the view that a lot of the serious fighting will be done at much greater distances than before, even over the horizon.

Its critics have a more conventional — they would say more practical - view of the future The new missile has this major problem: A pilot currently has no foolproof way of telling whether a blip on his radar screen is friend or foe. Proponents are sure that a way will present itself; they say that, if one did not, in an all-out war pilots would simply be told to assume that planes in certain sectors were enemy, and to shoot without inquiring. Nor was it reassuring to learn from a leaked docu-ment last week that the project officer does not think the manufacturer, Hughes Aircraft, is able yet to produce the weapon.

Congress should not appropriate produc-tion funds for a weapon of this importance under circumstances as shaky as these. A production vote would further undermine public confidence in both the military procurement system and congressional judgment. The con-ferees should either kill the project or keep it barely alive and give the Air Force a last small chance to justify it. No one can have much confidence in the weapon so far.

Not So Fast, Mr. Gorbachev

Has Mikhail Gorbachev suffered his first setback as the Soviet Union's new leader? The suspicion is that at the meeting of the Soviet Communist Party's central committee on July I, Mr. Gorbachev tried but failed to get rid of the prime minister, Nikolai Tikhonov. The supporting evidence is that on the night of the meeting an extended television news broadcast, designed to cover the central committee session, was abruptly canceled. This led Kremlin-watchers to argue that Mr. Gorbachev's intention of replacing Mr. Tikhonov with one of his own men, or perhaps even taking the job himself, may have gone awry.

There are two men he would have been happy to see in Mr. Tikhonov's chair: Vitaly Vorotnikov, the premier of the Russian republic, and Nikolai Ryzhkov, the party man who oversees the economy. Another possibility is Geidar Aliev, a deputy prime minister.

If Mr. Gorbachev did try to become prime minister himself, it may be that his party colleagues applied the unwritten rule that the posts of prime minister and party leader cannot be held by the same man. That dates back to 1964, when Nikita Khrushchev --- who had combined the two jobs - was deposed. (In Poland, the rule is broken by General Wojciech Jaruzelski, who heads both party and government, but Mr. Gorbachev can hardly point to the general as an example of success.) If, on the other hand, Mr. Gorbachev tried to replace Mr. Tikhonov with one of his own nominees, and failed, the rebuff would be even more serious. His colleagues would have been telling him that even this indirect control of the prime minster's office would be endowing Mr. Gorbachev with too much power.

To some analysis, combat between surface fleets seems irrelevant in the age of missiles and nuclear weapons. But the Russians obviously do not share this view. Soviet warships from the Baltic to the Black Sea have gathered in the blustery waters of the North Atlantic to conduct the largest naval war games in the history of Soviet sea power. These exercises, with more than 100 surface ships and submarines, including the aircraft carrier Kirov, are designed to simulate and block any attempt by North Atlantic Treaty Organization naval forces to reinforce Norway in case of war. The Russians are not alone. however, NATO ships and aircraft are monitoring their movements closely. The possibility of a clash is always possible, yet in a curious way, these operations are comforting: The notion of a naval war in which Norway or any other ally is to be resupplied and reinforced means that someone believes World War III can be held below the threshold of mass destruction.

1910: China Asks Return of Pirates PEKING - An interesting situation has arisen out of the fighting between the Portuguese and Chinese pirates on the Island of Colowan, which resulted in the Portuguese gaining the upper hand, the liberation of twenty Chimese ho had been kidnapped by the pirates, and the capture of forty of the latter. China expects the pirates to be handed over on the ground that they were apprehended on Chinese territory and that the kidnapping of the rescued Chinese which provoked the Portuguese to the conflict occurred in China. It appears that the Chinese gunboats which watched the bombardment of Colowan by the Portuguese offered to cooperate, but the Portuguese refused in view of the possession of the island being in dispute with China. 1935: U.S.-Soviet Pact Is Criticized WASHINGTON - A bitter condemnation of the Russo-American trade pact as the "crowning blow of Cordell Hull's ruinous, fantastic mania for free trade," was uttered by Senator Pat McCarran, Democrat of Nevada, who said he would soon seek in the Senate a modification of the reciprocal tariff act, under which Secretary of State Hull has acted. He considers that Mr. Hull's signature of the Russian-American trade pact and similar trade agreements was unconstitutional. Under Secretary of State William Phillips, in reply, said that reciprocal trade agreements were not involved in the Soviet pact, which simply gave the Soviets the benefit of rates of other nations signing trade pacts. In return, he pointed out, the Soviets had promised to buy $30,000,000 worth of American goods within the year.

There's No Clean Way To Fight U.S. Enemies

By Geoffrey Kemp

WASHINGTON - During his arena is more susceptible to confurecent visit to Southeast Asia, soon than the support of rebels. U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz met with many Cambodian refugees in Thailand, victims of the continuing civil war and the Victnamese occupation of their country.

In scenes reminiscent of Western leaders' pilgrimages to Afghan refugee camps in Pakistan, Mr. Shultz was warmly received by Cambodians who, like their Afghan counterparts, urged the United States to provide the means to liberate their country from a foreign invader.

Mr. Shultz's response was warm but noncommittal — in spite of a rather extraordinary series of measures taken by the House of Repre-sentatives while he was away. In voting to approve the foreign aid bill, the House passed resolutions providing financial aid to Cambodian resistance groups who could be certified "non-Communist," to the Afghan resistance movement, and to the forces of the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola, or UNITA, led by Ionas Savimbi, who are lighting Cubans in Angola. The House remains hostile to military aid for Nicaraguan "contras," but on most foreign aid questions the mood on Capitol Hill is now hawkish.

That may explain Mr. Shultz's negative response to the House proposal to help the Cambodians. Mr. Shultz does not want to provide military aid does not want to provide military aid to those resistance groups in part because he lears Congress can be fickle on those types of issues, denying tomorrow what it approves today and thereby undermining a carefully crafted policy. Unfortunately, the record of the past 10 years corroborates cord of the past 10 years corroborates

Mr. Shultz's pessimism.
But are things changing? To make sense of the belligerent mood in Congress and to understand U.S. problems in funding resistance groups, two questions must be answered.
First, is the shift in congressional opinion permanent or transitory? Second, what criteria should the United States and other democracies adopt when taking steps to support anti-Communist resistance movements which differ widely in size, composition, ideology and interna-tional support and who may them-selves use "terrorist" actions.

One explanation for the new hawk-ishness is that Congress has over-come the traumas of Vietnam and Watergate that had such a divisive impact on the foreign policy consensus. It now seems prepared to return to a more traditional, bipartisan approach on national security issues. If that is the case, we might see the day when funding the contras will be de rigneur, even for liberal Democrats.

A more political and therefore more transitory interpretation would point to three key issues that have recently influenced Congress. First, the coming 1986 elections and the need for the Democrats not to be seen as "soft" on defense and Communism. Second, the skill of the administration in removing arms conthe national agenda by focusing on the Geneva arms talks and the coming summit between Ronald Reagan and Mikhail Gorbachev. Third, and probably most relevant, the impact of the TWA hijacking and the outcry to hit back at U.S. enemies.

While most observers would welcome a more permanent return to consensus in foreign policy making, bipartisanship itself does not guarantee good policy, especially if U.S. goals and objectives are muddled. No each has its own identity and badge of respectability in the international community. Although some Alghan resistance groups adhere to the tenets of Islamic fundamentalism, they have become, as a whole, heroes in the United States and Western Europe, eulogized by the same people who fear and loathe Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and his Shia zealots. On the other hand, Mr. Savimbi's fighters are highly controversial and distiked in many quarters because of the material support they have re-ceived from South Africa and their effective disruption of Angolan economy, which in turn causes disarray among the multinational oil companies. Most isolated and despised are the contras, who have virtually no support in Europe and are regarded by many Americans as an artificial creation of the CIA.

Similarly, the regimes and military forces under attack from these resistance groups cover a wide spectrum, ranging from the well-trained, well-equipped Soviet Union and Vietnam to the less prepared and relatively forces of sovereign states. The Rus-poorly equipped Cubans in Angola sians probably kill more innocent Af-and the Sandinists. To come up with any simple description of the condi-tions of combat and conflict in these regions is exceedingly difficult. On the matter of values, ethics and the use of force, it requires wild leaps of the imagination to believe that the Afghan resistance, or any other group receiving U.S. support, will adhere to Queensberry Rules when using violence to defeat or intimate their enemies. How should we react to this given U.S. outbursts about the evils of such terrorist acts?

The umpleasant fact is that Americans are highly selective about who is called a terrorist and what is defined as a terrorist act. In popular usage, the term has come to be associated with radical, anti-Western groups who use violence against civilians. Yet terrorism is a form of warfare that can involve the regular armed

Yet the diplomatic record is dismal, especially in southern Africa and Central America. The United States has to realize that there is no clean way to fight its enemies. # Reagan Is Outpaced by His Doctrine

By Charles Krauthammer

WASHINGTON — There are four major anni-Communist insurgencies in the world — in Angola, Nicaragua, Cambodia, and Afghanistan — and within the last six weeks the House of Representatives has endorsed them all. It gave money to three, and repealed a 10-year ban on aid to Angola. In effect, the House, the last refuge for the American dove, adopted the Reagan Doctrine.

This doctrine, enunciated in the 1985 State of the Union address, declares U.S. support for anti-Communist revolution "on every continent from Afghanistan to Nicaragua." It constitutes the third reformulation since Vietnam of the policy of containment. First came the Nixon Doctrine, which relied on regional proxies and sank with the Shah. Then came the Carter Doctrine, which relied on regional proxies and sank with the Shah. Then came the Carter Doctrine, which provided the Carter Doctrine, and the Carter Doctrine of IIs Doctrine.

which promised unilateral projection of U.S. power, and disappeared with the Rapid Deployment Force. Enter the Reagan Doctrine, which relies on indigenous revolutionaries to challenge the Soviet empire at its periphery. It is the U.S. response to the Brezhnev Doctrine, which declared: Once a Soviet acquisition, always a Soviet acquisition. For many Democrats, coming around to this idea has meant a reversal. And that has given the cynics a field day. After the TWA hijacking and the killing of marines in El Salvador, Congress seems cranky. America has been kicked around lately, and so have Democrats. Some are still smarting from President Daniel had voted to cut off aid to the "contras," last April.

Now, it is true that the Reagan Doctrine costs little: less than $50 million a year. Politically, too, it is not very expensive. There are not many fans of, say. Indochinese nunism. And Congress is no island of stability. Still, Congress, like the two-ton gorilla, can be serious in spite of itself. Whenever it moves, the effects are serious. Democrats may indeed be acting from "political" motives. So what? However cynically conceived, the Reagan Doctrine amendments to the 1985 foreign aid bill have a serious effect. They amount to a significant, maybe

To be sure, opponents of the Reagan Doctrine have by no means been swept away. A majority of House Demo-crats are still to be moved. Representative Tom Downey is one of the leaders of the opposition. He explained his objection to the foreign-aid bill thus: "What this bill says is that the threat to use force is part and parcel of our diplomacy, and I think that's a mistake." Rarely has the advocacy of a toothless foreign policy been so forthright.

Majority Leader Jim Wright voiced a different protest. Contra aid makes us, he said, "accessories to an attempt to overthrow the government of Nicaragua."

The Reagan Doctrine even gathered support from House liberals. The Angolan move was introduced by Representative Clande Pepper; Stephen Solarz hatched the Cambodia aid idea. Seventy-three House Democrats and gift to the Nicaraguan control and amendody. voted aid to the Nicaraguan contras. And everybody supports the Afghan rebels. The great irony is that all these moves have left one man behind: Ronald Reagan.

Mr. Reagan proclaimed his doctrine (and George Shultz elaborated it in a major address in San Francisco), then shied away from taking any political risks on its behalf. On Angola, the administration thought the votes were not there and exerted no pressure. On Cambodia, it had to be pushed by the House. (The State Department opposed the measure. Mr. Shultz wants overt aid to come from Cambodia's neighbors, not the United States,) And on Nicaragua, the president lucked out. He refused to risk It lost in the House by two votes. The only thing that saved it in the end was Mr. Ortega's travel agent. The president obviously believes in the cause of anti-Communist revolution. However, he is reluctant to expend political capital for it. He has other priorities. In the name of these priorities (for example, arms sales to Jordan and more military aid to the Philippines), the White House has even threatened to veto the foreign aid bill. Imagine: Congress, the Democratic House, adopts the Reagan Doctrine, and Mr. Reagan vetoes the measure. That would be one irony too many. At that point, the Reagan Doctrine may have to be rechristened.

Gallup institute. Mr. Zetterberg's conclusion is that real change is impossible, whatever the ruling party. One reason is that Sweden, unique among Western democracies, has a majority of voters who are paid by

This 54 percent believe that their jobs and continued well-being are dependent on the continuation of a Social Democratic welfare state.

Paradoxically, the Conservative Party is gaining votes among the working class who traditionally voted for leftist policies. Increasingly, bluecollar workers feel they have more in common with the people who employ them than with the people who tax them. But since the private sector is at 38 percent a minority in the electorate, its chances of changing the system are slim. More optimistic political analysts see two possibilities for change, how-ever. The first is that the ideological winds that brought Margaret Thatcher and Ronald Reagan to power will change Sweden, and put economic issues into second place. But even so, any party will find its chances for action curtailed by laws that make it

The second perspective is more apocalyptic. Things will have to get much worse before they can get bet-ter. The welfare and the public sectors will eventually become so top-heavy that they will crumble again their own weight and bring about the total disruption of the economic affitem. But this is not a scenario any politician dares mention. In this case Sweden would not be governed by its own politicians, but by the interna-tional Monetary Fund and foreign banks. # Mitterrand: An 'Unanointed King' Studies Options

PARIS — The crisis that is not a Arctis — the crisis man is not a crisis looms steadily larger and louder in France. Can the parties of left and right peacefully share government power, "cohabiter," if, as expected, the right wins the legisla-tive elections scheduled for next March? All of France purports to have an opinion. One feels, nonetheless, that it is mainly an issue to occupy idle minds at the seashore. The obvious answer is yes, they can and will share power, if it comes to that. First of all, it is not clear that the election result will be as clear-cut as most think. A form of proportions representation will be introduced for this vote. Both right and left are internally divided over the question of forming coalitions. The purpose of returning to proportional representation is to recreate some of the coali-tion-making possibilities of past systems, those of the Third and Fourth Republics, to which many a Socialist heart still belongs, and where Fran-çois Mitterrand proved himself a political operator nonpareil.

The prime minister, Laurent Fabius, wants the Socialists to campaign next year in a spirit of "republican" reconciliation with moderate forces of all parties. The Secretary General of the Socialist Party, Lionel Jospin, a political puritan, wants the party to take a firm leftist line, attack the right, and try to recapture the Communist vote, even though the Communist leadership continues to condemn the idea of electoral cooperation with the Socialists. To further complicate matters for the Socialists, rival Socialist candidates for the presidency in 1988 already are declaring themselves, thereby reopening both the old and scarcely healed wounds in the party.

On the right, there are some who make little secret of their willingness, indeed eagerness, to set up house-keeping with the Socialists, if the political price is right. The major parties of the conservative opposition have sworn that they will stand together against compromise, but ambition may finally overpower solidarity. Coalition government, however, is an unlikely outcome. All the polls and present political evidence indicate a decisive victory by the conservative parties, enabling them to con-trol Parliament. Mr. Mitterrand foreign affairs. People have the right would then be obliged to nominate a to elect the legislative majority they Hobart Rowen's opinion column "Cheaper Oil Won't Slow Exploration" (July 18) did not touch on the recent spate of major oil company mergers and "poison pill" defensive measures used by other majors to fight off hostile takeovers. The ensuing debt load thus assumed has almost negated any "normal" exploration by these companies. Until such time that these debt loads can be mitigated, exploration by these maions will be curtailed.

Because of the present oversupply of oil and the above-mentioned factors, exploration now is in the doldrums and will get worse. "Sublime," said Bernadette Chirac, wife of Mayor Jacques Chirac of Paris, amid deafening applause after the Scherrer show, one of his best-received ever. Scherrer evidently feels that his boutique, which ranks with Ungaro's as one of the best in Paris, can handle the bread-and-butter daytime clothes so he has turned his couture attention to the carriage trade, women whose lives revolves around parties

At Pierre Cardin's, photographers went mad over the nine models whom the designer imported from China. Cardin, who has a fab-rics factory in China and a Maxim's restaurant in Beijing, showed a long and flat look, with skirts slit up the sides and Chinese collars, but mixed with familiar Cardin shapes, including kerchief hems, scalloped edges and complicated sleeves. Cardin's partner, André Oliver, who designs the evening wear, did the prettiest draped dresses in Paris, ranging from draped necklines and swept-up sa-rong hips to back-gathered bustles.

At Dior, Marc Bohan showed short and long without running into trouble. He fared better than in former seasons with his daytime wear, which alternated between very short, full-sleeved and voluminous coats and snappy, long and tight-waisted redingotes.

looked clumsy, especially the strap-less dresses of black velvet over black jersey turtlenecks. The grillwork embroidery in garish color combinations was not exactly inspired, but the slim black velvet dresses, with rhinestone buttons and coats in bright-colored linings, looked attractive.

Color was important everywhere; Bohan combined purple, hot pink and poison green. Par velvet, soft and sensuous, was on every designer's mind, as were rich brocades and lamés.

Hanaé Mori, who started the week of collections on Sunday, is opening a second boutique in a small new deluxe shopping center at the former Roger et Gallet shop on the Faubourg Saint Honore, along with Karl Lagerfeld, Louis Férand, Bernard Perris and the For Gstaad or Saint-Moritz, he cluded fox berets, fur capelets, baoffered Russian-influenced outlits, roque jewelry and kid booties.

This mammoth dramatization of an epic Indian poem is in three parts: "The Game of Dice," "Exile in the Forest" and "War." Each of the trio of lengthy evenings commences at about sundown, 9:30 P.M. In its entirety the presenta-tion runs more than nine hours and "runs" is le mot juste. It is never still. Scene swiftly follows scene and the excited tempo of its action has the relentless, unswerving flow of a mighty river. Nothing hesi-tates, nothing tarries, nothing

"Mahabharata," the Sanskrit classic on which Jean-Claude Carrière has based his trilogy, covers 12,000 pages — 15 times as long as the Bible — and is believed to have been compiled as much as 2,500 years ago. It is the Iliad of India, a gigantic poetic saga of the heroic age. Its immortalization of myths and folk fables has influenced religious and philosophical thought. Its central story relates the bitter conflict that arises between cousin clans, the Pandavas and the Kauravas, to rule a great kingdom. The violent power struggle that ensues brings on barbaric warfare in which the gods and jungle monsters participate, and it leads to such slaughter that humanity is endan-gered. Some may find a timely warning here, but this point is not stressed in the adaptation, which, like the original, contains no vil-lains. Dreadful crimes are committed, cruel deeds are done in both camps; man, the work intimates, is half god, half beast. The plays that Carrière has distilled from "Mahabharata" are in a form far from that of classic Sanskrit drama. Their expansive range, their urgent drive and the passages wherein characters speak of their personalities and motives — someimes in the third person - hint of the Shakespearean approach. theatrical illusion. His spectacle similarly one-keyed leaves the impression of enormous size, but it employs no herds of extras. He has the great outdoors as his scenery, but his company is relely small: 22 adult players, four child actors and an orchestra of five. Alain Crombecque, recently appointed director of the Avignon festival, intends to turn the festival into a center for new productions. On his program this year are premieres of Antoine Vitez's staging of Victor Hugo's "Lucrece Borgia," Tadeusz Kantor's "Revue," Jacques Lassalle's production of Gotthold Lessing's "Emilia Galotti" by the national theater of Strasbourg, and Alain Cuny in "The Isle of the Dead," an adaptation of Strindberg fragments.

The Comedie-Française production of "Macbeth" had its preview showing in the court of honor of the popes' palace this week; it was greeted with some applause and some booing.

Directed by Jean-Pierre Vincent, it was played in the open under a starless sky, for the most part in the dark. Though "Macbeth" is the shortest of Shakespeare's plays (there is a theory that an act was lost), this production, three hours without intermission, gave the impression of being one of the longest plays ever written by anyone.

Philippe Clevenot ranted as the ignoble Scot, appearing to have Mireille Maalouf, as the queen who mistaken the part for that of Richcovers her eyes with a band to be and III; he rendered Macbeth's meditative soliloquies in the same angry voice as his war cries. Cather-Ferran's Lady Macbeth was ONDON - The use of an antifreeze chemical to sweeten a batch of Austrian wine has sent a shiver through the normally self-assured wine world, but the practice of doctoring wine is hardly new. Wine experts say some producers or shippers tamper with poorquality wine to pass it off as something better. In France in 1974, for example, some merchants were convicted of selling an inferior wine as Bordeaux. how far producers can go. The European Community has essentially made uniform the laws of its 10 members, though there are varia-tions, with producers in some regions having to conform to local requirements. Italy, for instance, bans sweeteners. In most countries, producers have to meet strict con-

Failure of Brokerage Firm

Raises Questions on Safety

It will be raised again next Monday when the Federal Com-modity Futures Trading Commission examines the unusual events that caused the collapse of the member concern on March

The regulatory agency will want to know, among other things, why customer funds were fro-

What is known is that on March 18 several customers of Volume Investors, who had been profitably writing gold options calls for some time, reached their position limits — 4,000 contracts of 100 ounces each. Because writing an options call is the same as selling short, the writers, in effect, had sold short 12 million ounces of gold at various prices.

The writers, who had relatively modest financial resources, were counting on a further decline in gold, in which case the options buyers would not exercise or call away the underlying bullion, and they would be able to continue to pocket the premiums they had received for selling the options.

But on March 19, for reasons that still are not clear, gold prices opened higher and continued to rise, fueled by short covering, to close up an extraordinary $39, to $339. It was the largest one-day percentage rise ever recorded in gold. Some traders believe the exposed condition of the options writers encouraged bold speculators to push up the price to force the shorts to pay dearly to buy

HATEVER the case, the writers apparently could not meet margin calls and their broker, Volume investors, in turn, could not meet its obligations to the exchange's clearinghouse. An exchange's clearing member, not its customers, must make good on all contracts. The function of clearing houses is to transfer the gains and losses of member firms at the end of every trading day.

Whether it was unbridled greed on the part of the options writers, the lack of prudent supervision of their accounts by the broker, or whatever, the fact is that Volume Investors became insolvent," said Alan J. Brody, Comex president. "Normally, the unaffected accounts of a collapsed firm are transferred to other brokers. In this case, it was decided to freeze, despite the uproar we knew would follow, in order to sort the mess out."

Last Monday, the Comex and Volume Investors, now in receivership, came to an agreement. Mr. Brody said that his exchange's clearinghouse agreed to give the receivers $9.2 million and Volume Investors gave $2.6 million in cash and a note for

"We expect that the receivers will start disbursing these funds to customers of Volume Investors within a few weeks," Mr. Brody said, "but I should like to point out that insolvencies of brokerage houses are, unhappily, not rare and that such situa-tions are bound to crop up from time to time. But what should never happen is the questioning of the integrity of a clearing-house, and in our industry it still basn't."

Meanwhile, the two major principals in Volume Investors, Charles E. Federbush and Owen J. Morrissey, said they had no intention of reviving their firm. "What happened to us," Mr. Federbush said Friday, "is a broker's nightmare. Our biggest customers chose not to meet their obligations. As for Owen and I, we never questioned our responsibilities to our nondefaulting

Profits Declined In U.S.

Analysts Cite Slow 2d Period

By Jonathan P. Hicks New York Times Service NEW YORK — Corporate profits appear to have fallen moderately in the United States in the second quarter, according to

The weak earnings, they said, are the result of slow economic growth, the continued strength of the dol-lar, the widening trade deficit and a trend toward doing more business with foreign suppliers. Economists said a sufficient number of corporations had re-ported by the weekend for them to Data Resources Inc., an economic research concern, estimated the total of annualized, seasonally adjusted, after-tax profits for the sec-ond quarter at $136.3 billion, down 2.1 percent from a year earlier. Profits in the first quarter were $141 billion, the company noted.

The profits of computer concerns slumped and those of consumer product companies were up

"A lot depends on reducing the budget deficit and bringing down interest rates further, which will lessen the burden of a strong U.S.

The mixed results reported by companies that rely heavily on military contracts was a departure from recent years, when the Rea-gan administration's military buildup brought strong profits. "Companies in the defense area are still doing relatively well, but there are cycles that even that in-dustry is going through," said Rob-ert A. Gough, a senior vice president at Data Resources. mnications industry newspaper publishers reported higher results than broadcasters.

OPEC to Focus On Price Levels, Not Production

GENEVA — Members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries agreed Monday at a full meeting to defer haggling over production quotas and to concen-trate instead on pricing.

OPEC ministers said they would discuss production at a later meeting perhaps in the autumn. Mean-while, a Saudi proposal to trim the official OPEC price of heavy crude oil appeared likely to gain at least reluctant approval from a majority of members, though several have rejected it.

The ministers were scheduled to continue their meeting Tuesday

OPEC is groping for a way to stabilize oil prices, which have fallen about 25 percent over the past five years. The price decline has reduced the 13 members' share of the non-Communist world oil market from more than 60 percent to about a third.

Subroto, Indonesia's oil minister who is serving as president of the conference, exhorted members to unite and to stop cheating on pricing and production agreements. He said OPEC's critics were hoping that the organization would fall apart, and added, "We shall not give them that satisfaction." OPEC's official prices are $1 to $3 a barrel above current market rates, but most member countries sell their oil at a market-related price. Saudi Arabia, which has insisted on charging the official OPEC price, has seen its output fall to a 20-year-low of around 2.2 million barrels a day.

As major producers of heavy crude, the Saudis are hoping that a more competitive price will be set for that oil type to help them boost sales. The current official price for heavy crude is $26.50, compared to a market price of around $25.

Saudi Arabia has not publicly named the size of the cut it is seeking. But the kingdom is forecasting greater demand, and the reduction presumably would leave its price well above the market level. The Saudi proposal is supported appear likely to agree to it in light of Saudi Arabia's power to flood the market and depress prices worldwide.

Iran, Libya and Algeria oppose official price cuts on principle although they sell their oil at market prices. The three countries dissent-ed from OPEC's decision last winter to cut the price of light crudes by $1 and to raise heavy crudes by 50 cents.

Mana Said al Oteiba, the United Arab Emirates' oil minister, also expressed reluctance to accept any price cuts. In a poem he customarily delivers at OPEC conferences, he called price-cutting "the impotent's step to surrender."

The production question is even more contentious, with several members, notably Iraq and Ecua-dor, pressing for higher quotas. Ecuador already is producing at a rate that exceeds its daily quota of (Continued on Page 15, Col. 5)

Unemployment Is Down in EC

LUXEMBOURG - Unemployment in the European Community fell from 12.3 million people in May to 12.1 mil-lion in June, but the June figure was 2.8 percent higher than a year ago and the rate was expected to rise again soon, the community's statistics office said Monday. Reductions in the jobless rate from June 1984 to June 1985 were recorded in Denmark, Belgium and the Netherlands, with unemployment rising signifi-cantly in Britain, Ireland and canty in Britain, Ireland and Italy, according to the seasonal-ly unadjusted figures.

The number of people regis-tered at unemployment offices in community member coun-tries, excluding Greece, which does not keep complete figures, represented 10.7 percent of the working population.

British Telecom, AT&T Said to Plan Venture

By Eric N. Berg

New York Times Servi NEW YORK - British Telecommunications PLC is expected to announce this week a venture with American Telephone & Telegraph Co. to provide rooftop-to-rooftop communications between New York and London.

Executives from both companies declined to discuss the project before a news conference scheduled for Thursday in New York is held. But according to experts in interna-tional communications, the new offering may be similar to Satstream, a service begun in February 1984 by British Telecom to provide rooftop-to-rooftop calling between Britain and Canada.

The term rooftop-to-rooftop means that calls are transmitted from a satellite antenna dish on a customer's roof to a communications satellite and then to another privately owned roof dish on the

Such calls now are typically sent over land lines from the American customer's premises to one of four giant, shared dishes in the United States. They are then bounced off an international communications satellite to a shared dish on the receiving end before they travel over more land lines to reach their

The current method works well, but it is costly. Communications professionals estimate that close to 50 percent of the cost of a New York-to-London call, for example, is incurred carrying the signal the kilometers) one way.

After three strained years, aggravated by fare cutting that threatened to bankrupt the New-port Beach-based carrier, Aircal returned to stable prices and profitability last year. Since then it has poured millions of dollars into new Boeing 737-300 jets and a barrage of advertising aimed at unseating its rival. The company has signed a contract to lease 12 jets valued at $300 million, and it

PSA, recovering from its own financial slump, is fighting back with an advertising blitz and a new $1-billion fleet of planes that the company hopes will expand its business in the Pacific Morthwest.

The San Diego-based line helped create the corridor's competitive atmosphere in the 1960s and 1970s by initiating low-fare, high-frequency flights before the industry was deregulated in 1978. But PSA and Aircal discovered that fare wars were a disastrous form of competition, and are now focusing on services and marketing strategies instead. Despite average load factors of 55 percent and increased freon percent and independent re-prices have remained untouched for a year and a half. A full-price fare is about $89 and the discount price is $69 for a one-way has options for 11 more.

"As a customer, I can leapfrog those terrestrial charges entirely if I can put an earth station next to me," said Roger J. Cochetti, a spokesman for the Communications Satellite Corp., which earlier this month started a service similar to the one that British Telecom and AT&T are expected to announce. The Comsat service is a joint venture with the TRT Telecomm tions Corp. of Washington.

Whether British Telecom and AT&T will actually propose to place dishes directly on customers' roofs is not clear. Since a privately owned dish can cost about $3 million, it could result in companies instead erecting shared dishes near customers' premises.

The venture is important to British Telecom's image in North America. The company, which had been the invertigent owned phone been the government-owned phone monopoly in Britain, was sold to the public last year and was eager to shed its image as a stodgy bureaucracy unable to participate in new communications technologies.
About 25 companies have applied for licenses to erect roof dishes for international calling. More applications are expected. It remains to be seen whether the market can support dozens of players. For one thing, close to onethird of all international calls are still carried by underwater cable. For another, rooftop-to-rooftop calling is, by definition, a privatewire service for talking or sending computer data between two num-bers only. Callers can only call where a dish has been installed.

Industry experts estimate that the market for rooftop-to-rooftop calling will be about $100 million for American carriers by 1990. The market for the current way of making international calls is about $2 billion for American carriers.

Prices were lower in moderately active trading on the American Stock Exchange. Analysts said the market was weakening prinarily because of profit-taking after last week's solid gains. The market's sliding was part of a consolida-tion rather than a cause for alarm, said Ricky Harrington, of Interstate Securities, Charlotte,

"It's still a good-looking market," he said, pointing to the strength gained in some basic industry stock groups during last week's ad-vances, including chemicals, aluminums and echnology issues.

"There's going to be a broader advance before the summer's over," he said, with the mar-ket pushing to new bighs.

"After those substantial advances, we were bound to get some profit-taking," said Monte Gordon of Dreyfus Corp.

On the trading floor, G.D. Searle was near the top of the actives, and up a bit.

Jin Lie, vice president of the economic planning commission in Chongquing, said in an inter-view Monday that he expected growth to fall to 16 percent for the full year from 23 percent in the first half in the city. Chongqing has a population of about 3.2 million and is in Sichuan province in southwestern

China's industrial output and retail sales boomed in the first half of 1985. According to offirial figures, first-half industrial growth of 23.1 percent was three times higher than planned and was up from 14 percent in 1984. A spokesman for the Sichuan bureau for foreign eco-nomic relations said banks had cut back on credit and there were curbs on the money supply and wage bonuses.

THE HOUSE OF MITFORD

By Jonathan Guinness. With Catherine Guinness. 604 pages. $22.95. Viking Penguin Inc., 40 West 23d Street, New York, N. Y. 10010.

Reviewed by Victoria Glendinning

HIS IS an urbane family saga for those I who belong to what Jonathan Guinness calls "the talking classes." The Mitford-girls have been talked about virtually since Nancy, the eldest, was born in 1904; she became a novelist and a francophile. Diana married the fascist Sir Oswald Mosley, and Unity idolized Adolf Hitler; Jessica became passionately leftist. Pam and Debo opted out of notoriety, though Debo is distinguished as the Duchess of Devonshire and chatelaime of Chatsworth.

There is a biography of Unity, and a life of Nancy by Selina Hastings is in preparation. Nancy's autobiographical novels and the memoirs of several other sisters have contributed to the Mitford mythology and the Mitford indus-try, to which "The House of Mitford" is a hefty addition. Jonathan Guinness is the son of Lady Diana Mosley's first marriage, and his daughter Catherine has helped him with the research.
He is at pains to point out that he is taking the Mifford story seriously; the society gossip-column way in which their activities have been chronicled (there has even been a musical) has trivialized them. His book begins with extend-ed studies of the two grandfathers — Bertie

Not unfairly, Guinness claims that here "we have to picture Fascism not as it appears today, but as it appeared in 1933." In any case, Diane but as it appeared in 1933." In any case, Disnigand Unity "I want everyone to know that I am a Jew hater") stuck to Hitler in the years that followed: Diana's wedding reception after hat marriage to Mosley was in Goebbels's house. Unity's extremism was on the grand scale that combines moral idiocy with tragedy: On the outbreak of war, she made a suicide attempt. that left her brain-damaged.

Guinness crowns his discussion of this and easy topic by drawing a distinction between Mosley's "hostility to the lews," apparently of political grounds, and Hitler's "anti-Scaltism"; there was a "vital difference" between Mosley and Hitler which it is "only fair to acknowledge, he says: "For Hitler, a Jew, however well-intentioned, could never fully renounce his Jewishness. For Mosley he could do so." Words fail me.

Fighter Identified as Escaped Convict

By Michael Katz New York Times Service NORFOLK, Virginia — Mike

Blumberg, his 71-year-old manag-er, said he was "dumbfounded" when he learned that his 27-yearold boxer, Roberto Medina, a man he knew as "a real friend, just like a son," was in reality a 29-year-old escaped convict named John E. Garcia.

Kathy Graham, the fighter's friend from St. Petersburg, Florida, knew, and she said on Monday that so did another woman, who Graham believes alerted the authorities about him.

Garcia, arrested 61 times in the Denver area, escaped from the Col-orado State Penitentiary in Canon City on June 25, 1982, moved to St. Petersburg and began a career as a professional boxer. That career apparently ended Saturday after he somehow stood up to a six-round battering from Meldrick Taylor, one of four 1984 Olympic boxing stars who fought on a card here. Garcia had a rough day. Compu-

WADSWORTH, Illinois — The hoofbeat ballet of graceful Lippizaner horses dances across a dirt riding ring near this village in a performance of classical dressage practised only here and at the Imperial Spanish Riding School in Vienna.

Temple Farms, outside Chicago, has one of the largest herds of this elegant breed, which originated near Trieste more than 400 years ago when the Austrian court imported horses from Spain to improve domestic breeds.

During the closing days of World War II, General George S. Patton ordered a special mission to forestall advancing Soviet troops and protect the Lippizaners at Vienna from capture. In 1958, the American industrialist Temple Smith brought 20 Royal Lippizaners to the United States from Vienna, after years of negotiations. Smith, whose family still owns Temple Farms, died in 1980.

"At one time after World War II. this breed of horse, due to wars and relocation and one thing and another, damn near vanished," said Sandy Cassatt, manager of Temple Farms. "Mr. Smith in a sense saved it from virtual extinction by seeking out horses in Europe. He was almost as important to the develop-ment of the Lippizan horse as Pat-

"He may very well have saved the breed because I think the funds with which he paid for the original draft probably did a great deal to keep the rest of them going along

The Lippizaner is a strong, graceful, highly trainable and courageous horse. Of the estimated 1,200 Lippizaners in the world, 165 are at the 7,500-acre (3,000-hectare) Temple Farms, whose corn, soybean and wheat crops help keep horses and trainers in business.

From May to September the farm draws about 45,000 visitors to watch a show presided over by Karl Mikloa, a former student at the Spanish Riding School, and Ger-man-born Alf Athenstaedt.

Along with three rider-trainers, assistant riders and apprentices, dressed in classic Austrian army uniforms, the two riding masters put the horses through a performance ranging from ballet to leaps and kicks originating in medieval cavalry maneuvers.

Famed Refuge's Policy Has Changed Because 'We Saw a Lot of Hurting Girls Out There'

By Judy Klemesrud

BOYS TOWN, Nebraska. —
Boys Town is not strictly Boys Town anymore. Jeanine Petrie, 16 years old, is here, the only girl in the weight-lifting class. Her sister, Jessica, 15, cuts men's hair in the barber class. And Tina John, 16, is the first girl to be chosen as a fire cadel.

They are among 26 girls at the institution for homeless, wayward, abused and neglected children, founded in 1917 by the Reverend Edward J. Flanagan, a Roman Catholic priest, and famous as a result of the 1938 movie "Boys Town," starring Spencer Tracy and Mickey Rooney.

Since June of last year, girls from all over the United States have been admitted to Boys Town, an incorporated village 10 miles (16 kilometers) west of Omaha. Girls were first accepted in 1979, but until last summer only eirls from the Omaha area were allowed to live at the institution. In the past six years 127 girls have lived there, with eight more expected in August. There are 415 boys.

"I'd love to see it half and half," said the Reverend Val J. Peter, the institution's executive director, "But I can't guarantee it's going to happen soon. We're going to go slow, and show everybody else how to do it."

Peter said girls were admitted to Boys Town "because we saw a lot of hurting girls out there." Girls' problems are more visible these days, he added, "because of the physical, psychological and sexual abuse that is now known

The move to admit girls has not all been roses. Five girls became pregnant and had to leave, Peter said. Girls also take more of the counselors' time, he said, "be-cause girls talk about their problems a great deal, while boys keep inside themselves."

The preponderance of boys has caused some problems for the girls, not all of whom believe a place with 16 boys to every girl is trie, the weight lifter, who is from Sarasota, Florida.

While Petrie said she made it a rule not to date boys from Boys Town, other girls said they were seeing boys from the school. One of them, Mary Lou Shoffner, 17, of Alliance, Ohio, when asked about the boy-girl ratio, said, "It's great — but it's strange."

The boys, too, have mixed opinions about the girls. "I think it's beautiful," said DuWayne Smiley, 17, of Chicago, president of the student council. Most of the time you get tired of seeing all the guys. A girl around brightens the day."

He added that because Boys Town was "one of the best-disciplined places around," the boys and girls do not have to worry about fighting and sexual contact. "We're all brothers and sisters here," he said.

On the other hand, Robert Crockett, 16, of Toledo, Ohio, said he thought the growing number of girls would only cause problems. "You know, sneaking out of rooms at night, the boy-girl

A sore point with the girls is that the boys are allowed to go on dates in cars with off-campus girls, while the Boys Town girls are not allowed car dates; they are supervised on social occa-sions. "We're more restricted than the guys," Jessica Petrie said. "We're not equal."

Boys Town is home to a girl whose parents committed suicide. a girl who was sexually abused by her father, a girl whose mother is a prostitute, a girl who is a member of Alcoholics Anonymous and a mmber of girls who were referred by courts because they were considered unmanageable.

"We did everything that a kid could do — except we never killed anyone," Jessica Petrie said in describing why she and her sister were at Boys Town. The girls live in groups of seven in large, pleasantly decorated homes converted from dormitories. With each group lives a married couple, known as their family-teachers. The girls do most of the cooking and cleaning. They are awarded privileges on a selfmotivating system in which they get points for such things as good manners and good work habits. Points are subtracted for such infractions as fighting and truancy.

dence, each girl rushes up, extends her hand and says something like, "Helio, I in the youths are from namely girls have learned how to conduct groups, Peter said.
"When I go out in public, I feel when I go out in public, I feel thing like, "Hello, I'm Tina John, afterward they are asked by their family-teachers to recount some of the things they learned about their gnest during the table talk. Points are awarded to the girls according to their skills at these social graces. The boys live under a similar cording to Peter, are the staff members who are "in the trench-" with the youths. One of them, Frank Coopersmith, 49, left a job managing a radio station to join his wife, Donna, 40, in becoming a family-teacher. The job pays them $18,000 a year jointly. The family-teachers act as the girls' parents, teaching them everything from personal hygiene to grocery shopping to etiquette to how to balance a checkbook.

"It's like being at home with my own family," Coopersmith said. "It's got a million head-aches. But it's the most rewarding job I've ever had."

The girls attend classes with the boys at three schools on campus: a middle school for grades three through eight; the Boys Town High School, and the Vocational Career Center, which offers classes in welding, baking, hair styling, auto mechanics and

The average stay, according to Peter, is 18 to 24 months, although some youngsters stay longer. Boys Town has no fences, and about 14 percent of the youths run away each year, he said, "but most of them came back on their own."

Shoffner said she had run away five times before she finally decided to stay awhile. Now, she said, she is getting straight A grades, compared with the "straight Fs" she was getting at home. She credits her turnaround to "Frank and Donna" -- the Coopersmiths -- "who really love us and will do anything for us."

The point system results in some surprisingly good behavior.
When a visitor enters a girls' resifrom day to day, on a recent day from day to day, on a recent day Fontella Behm, 13, of Sarasota, was the only black girl on cam-pus. Overall, about 35 percent of the youths are from minority > sort of embarrassed being only with white people," Behn said. "I wish I was back in Florida." Most of the girls, though, seem to like Boys Town.

Trina Tweedy, 17, of Omaha, has a part-time job as a teacher at a preschool center and plans to system, but in smaller groups, in become a special-education houses. The family-teachers, acteacher. "Before I came here," she said, "I'd been in a lot of foster homes where they'd say, 'I love you,' and then kick you out. I couldn't even look people in the eyes or hold a conversation. "Now," she added with a smile,

"I think I have a chance at making something out of my life."

vaults of the Thomas Alva Edison Historical Site in West Orange. New Jersey, have been recovered in Redwood City, California, in the home of a former Stanford University professor, officials say. Phillip Burns Petersen, 63, who was dismissed by Stanford in 1977 after charges that he embezzled more than $60,000 from a petty cash fund, was indicted by a federal grand jury on charges of concealing stolen property, said W. Hunt Dumont, a U.S. attorney. Among the most noteworthy memorabilia recovered were an original sketch of Edison's phonograph, a Matthew Brady photograph of Edison and an electric pen, the precursor to the mimeograph machine. Other items included letters to the inventor from President Franklin Roosevelt and Helen Keller. Phonographs, electric light bulbs, recorders, com memorative medals and hundreds of binders containing thousands of documents were recovered from Petersen's home, according to an FBI inventory. The FBI had learned that Petersen was attempting to sell some of the items to Bryan C. West, a North Carolina collector and dealer, federal docu-

The Minnesota Orchestra has engaged Edo de Waart, music director of the Netherlands Opera, to succeeding the British conductor Neville Marriner, 61, as music director starting in the autumn of 1986. De Waart, 44, who signed a Netherlands Opera in in 1988. Marriner, founder of the hugely popular Academy of St. Martin in the Fields chamber orchestra, will leave the Minnesota post next May but continue with commitments to European orchestras.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher gave a reception at Downing Street after her party's chief whip, John Wakeham, 53, married his secretary, Alison Ward, 35, in London. Ward was seriously injured and his first wife, Roberts, was killed when the Irish Republican Army bombed a Conservative Party meeting in Brighton last year.

After nine years in a hospital psychiatric ward, Charles Manson has been declared sane and returned to San Quentin to serve out a life sentence. Manson, convicted of leading a mass-nurder spree in four-year contract, will leave the California in 1969, has "been less of a problem in the last few years," said a San Quentin spokesman, Frederick Everly. "It was decided that he could be more appropriately managed" in the general prison population, Everly said. Manson was imprisoned at San Quentin in 1971 to await execution in the killings of the actress Sharon Tate and eigh: others. In 1972 the Supreme Court overturned the capital punishment law under which Manson was convicted, and he was sent to income exceeding $1 million last Folsom Prison. He was returned to year, his personal financial disclonext year to the prison hospital at Vacaville for psychiatric evaluation. His third parole hearing is scheduled for November. He was turned down for parole in 1979 and
